7.1 Was hat dir an dieser Lehrveranstaltung gefallen?

Like some of the lecture topics

Some lecturers carried the module. I personally suggest the lectures on Fuzzing and Side Channel Attacks, as they were especially well done overall. For those who have not yet worked a lot with statistics, the lecture is also quite nice. The lecturer on secure multi party communication was a little bit nervous but I am sure they will nail the lecture next year :)

7.2 Was könnte noch besser gemacht werden?

The arrangement of the lecture topics. It was very varied.

A lot. Especially on the organizational side of the module. First of all, the basic concept of having the lecturer change like every one to two weeks on average is not necessarily a bad idea. But it just did not work out very well. The spread and the depth of the topics are quite unhealthy: some lecturers drag mediocresly interesting topics across multiple weeks while others have 90minutes to sparsely talk about their favorite field of research. Moreover and more importantly: There were technical issues every single week. Just to name a few: - the underlying system to upload and automatically correct the sheets had issues like almost every single week, be it asynchronous information, pipelines their feedback or grading not working or the system not working at all. Also you do not get a correction per se, meaning you have to attend the exercise to understand why you have less points than expected - outdated sheets uploaded instead of newer ones - almost every week there were mistakes on the sheets, the slides or the solutions, decreasing fun of doing the sheets. (some mistakes were there already terms before and the lecturer does no update it / ignores feedback) These problems do not go well together with the fact that you need 50% on a sheet to pass it, having to pass 70% of the sheets. (but I think that the lecturers went easy-ish on grading due to the weekly issues)

More Feedback on the exercises (more than just the points on flavius) Less Topics but more detailed and connecting them more instead of giving a shallow introduction to a concept and then going to the next one. more examples For some lectures: connect excersizes to the lecture content (having to use google for every task because it wasnt discussed in the lecture feels not right)
